USAGE HIGHLIGHT

When campus security received a call from a female student who had been attacked on campus, Fred Miller, California Lutheran University's director of public safety, sprang into action, sending out a notification to the campus community via text messaging, mobile phones, office phones, and email. Getting the word out quickly alerted students and others to be extra cautious and gave the police an added advantage—far more eyes and ears out looking for the perpetrator.

According to Miller, "We couldn't have alerted the campus so quickly to the attack without the Everbridge system. It would have taken much too long to be practical."

"After conducting extensive tests and using the Everbridge system during actual emergencies, we are confident that the system performs as designed ... Everbridge is an effective component of our overall emergency notification strategy."
